*No matter who publishes any kind of legal definitions: When aborting, that is to say, murdering the innocent and defenseless is redefined as an act in public interest, it is ultimately the last straw. Whoever doesn't now become active and at least pass on the V&C with all their heart makes himself guilty of these crimes. Staying silent means purposefully consenting! So do something! ### Why should the baby live?

es. In the magazine "Journal of Medical Ethics", medical ethics expert Alberto Giubilini (University of Milan) and the philosopher Francesca Minerva (University of Melbourne) propagate a totally new ideology for abortions. They demand the right of parents to post-birth abortion in every case. Infants are to be seen as equal to a fetus and having no moral claim to life before developing a personality. And there we have it: Salami tactics – give an inch, take a mile! ...

The question is whether those propagandists who are gradually familiarizing the public with such life-threatening ideologies have a moral claim to life themselves.

What the brain dead are still capable of

Up to the point of confirmation of "brain death" by doctors (the "legal" death of the patient), this person was still cared for by the hospital staff as a coma patient in every way. He was fed, bathed, and attended to in every way needed. Male "brain dead" are even capable of having an erection. Female pregnant brain dead let the embryo further grow in their body. The embryo matures to the point of birth in the body of a "living corpse." Wounds can still heal. Coma patients react to external happenings and social stimuli e.g. the visit of relatives. The brain dead can live for days, weeks, even months or years until they meet a peaceful, respectable death. Before harvesting the organs at the operating table, these "dead" often receive muscle relaxers and painkillers, every so often they get a general anesthetic or are anesthetized locally. Often they are strapped to the operating table to reduce irritating movement. On the contrary: Just like a living patient that is operated on, the "brain dead" react to unconscious pain: Their pulse speeds away, blood pressure rises, hormones are released. A real dead person, a corpse is obviously not capable of such reactions anymore. Since they cannot entirely rule out the feeling of pain, Switzerland now by law enforces a general anesthetic for the "dead" before harvesting organs ... they shy away from suggesting a general anesthetic, because this would evidently reveal to even the greatest layman that the dead organ donor is in reality not yet dead.

Attention vacation! Organ transplants: Legal provisions in Europe

For the furthered consent provision, the organ donor has to have consented to organ harvesting while alive. If there is no statement of consent, the surviving closest of kin can decide the probable will of the person dying. This provision is in effect in Denmark, Germany, Great Britain, Ireland, Iceland, Lithuania, Malta, the Netherlands, Romania, Switzerland and Turkey. For the objection provision the person dying becomes an organ donor if he failed to explicitly object to such while alive. The surviving relatives do not possess the right to object. This provision is in effect in Italy, Luxemburg, Austria, Poland, Portugal, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, the Czech Republic, and Hungary. The objection provision may possibly be connected to the surviving closest of kin's right to object, as is the case in Belgium, Finland, Norway, and Russia. In Bulgaria not even the objection provision counts. There the so-called "emergency provision" is in effect. They can remove whatever they need the most!

What you should know about organ donation

Every person who consents to organ donation or whose closest of kin consent after said person's death; every person who dies in a country in which the so-called objection provision is in effect without having registered his or her objection must know that after his "death" only lively-fresh organs can be harvested and transplanted, not lifeless organs from a corpse."*

kee. Definition Death – Brain Death: A Comparison

For millennia, the following definition was binding: A person is dead when his heart and his breathing has come to an irreversible standstill and spirit and soul have finally left the body.

Consequently:

The body grows cold, death contusions show up, rigor mortis sets in, decomposition starts.

In 1968, the Harvard Ad-hoc Commission redefined death of a human being after a case by the state vs. transplant physicians about purposed killing:

A person is dead when his brain is irreversibly destroyed. (In medical circles this state is called "coma dépassé", meaning "final coma".) This means a "living corpse", whose heart is still beating and sustaining the circulatory system. The body is completely supplied with blood, holds a normal temperature and metabolizes. The dysfunctional brain is also supplied with blood, not cold, not in a state of decomposition.

Lethal contradictions

In September 2011, the European court judged the contamination (=infestation!) of honey with GMOs (=Genetically Modified Organisms). Consequently, GMO-contaminated (= genetically infested) honey must be destroyed from now on. Vaccines and medications are also known to always have side-effects. Vaccine production is impossible without GMOs (= Genetically Modified Organisms). But the use of GMOs is illegal according to the constitution and therefore punishable. For this reason, every current vaccine should be declined.

ADHD*: A fabricated illness

af. The American psychiatrist Leon Eisenberg (!), the scientific father of ADHD, admitted in an interview seven months before his death:

"ADHD is a prime example for a fabricated illness."***

He was a member of the committee of diagnostic and statistical handbook of psychiatric disorders (DSM). As a great number of other members, he had financial ties to pharmaceutical companies. The actual vocabulary of psychiatry is currently defined on all levels by the pharmaceutical industry. A profitable business: The use of ADHD medication rose in Germany during the span of only 18 years from 34 kg in 1993 to the record amount of 1780 kg in 2011!

That is a 51 times higher earning! They fabricate record wins at the cost of the weakest (mainly children) with yet unforeseeable effects!

Environmental pollution – not only in our food?

ke. Quoted from Professor H. J. Gamm's "General Guideline to Sexual Education Curriculum management in Hessen" (teaching manual): "We need sexual stimulation of the students in order to realize the restructuring of society and in order to thoroughly eradicate obedience to authority, including love of the parents." Mr Gamm is emeritus professor at the Darmstadt University's department of education. On October 1, 2010, he received the Comenius Award (What, in the world?! n.b.e.). Through this commendation, the foundation honors his special engagement in the area of child and youth programs. The educator has devoted decades to education reforms and developing curriculum "suitable" for children.

Conclusion ●

Is such a poisoning not worse than any environmental contamination?
Is there anywhere on this earth a majority who is ready to let their children be taken by such wolves without defending themselves?
