INTRO

In Tekos, near Caucasus, there are eleven- and twelve-year old university lecturers. How can this be? The answer is that we already possess a clear insight of every perfected knowledge within us – even before people try to teach it to us in school. It is that simple. This great truth has got also to break through concerning all the issues and the problems of this world – especially in regards to our ramshackle monetary system, which at the moment is driving whole continents to utter ruin. As long as we think those are inconceivably complicated contexts, the merciless economic destruction continues. In fact it is very easy and every kid can understand it.

There are private people, that obtained the right to print money by fraud... without having to work or to be held responsible for their acts. Using this money they buy all the real value assets: land, lakes, islands, houses, factories, weapons, resources, and whole states... quite simply everything. They are like Monopoly players that can buy up the whole lot, because they themselves print any amount of money they need. Now, you jump up alarmed: wait a moment, that's not acceptable - that is a crime! See, you already got the point – that's how plain it is. So just let your fellow people find out about it - before your last possessions are gone! You will be fastest by passing on the V&C.

Questionable role of the World bank and IMF

hg. The IMF* and the World Bank only give loans under certain conditions (for the “rescue fund” as well), involving among other things, the privatization of public institutions. If a nation falls into the debt trap, it is forced to sell its most important infrastructure and public institutions in order to receive a further loan from the IMF. These public institutions, which are turned into stock corporations, are bought up mainly by international investment firms, so that by now a great part of global infrastructure is under the control of these investment firms. And who is behind these firms? Their owners are often closely connected to the central-banks owners or are even identical to those who control the World Bank and the IMF.

This is how global infrastructure increasingly comes under World Bank/IMF control and places the peoples into their hands. But wait: that is not all! The World Bank demands that the nations which they have preyed on like this grant judicial immunity from possible negative effects caused by the required conditions. We are being preyed upon and even do not realize it; we are being cheated and are kept in the dark because we do not know the game that is being played! How important it is that all these interrelations are brought to the light and that everyone knows about them! This is the only way to prevent worse corruption from happening!

Even interdependent big corporations are avoiding taxes!

In the German newspaper “Die Welt”, Florian Hassel writes about researchers from the Eidgenössische Technische Hochschule (Swiss Tech College) ETH bringing evidence that supranational corporations are closely interdependent. They rule the world economy. Out of 43,060 affiliated groups 1,318 dominate four fifth of the world economy. The elite of the elites consists of 147 affiliated groups who decide over 40% of the world economy. The top 50 are led by the British financial corporation Barclays. This network increases the danger of financial issues being passed on from one country to another in case of an economic crisis. The companies avoid paying taxes by relocation. In this ranking the influential linkage to politics is not included.

The bankers that are of greatest influence almost never reveal their true identity because they hold a decisive share in many banks.

Dispossession as a norm

hf. Government stocks are known as secure funds; however these are secure only as long as our statesmen do not fall for speculations and violate their citizens' rights. Innumerable people and small savers in Greece had to go through this bitter experience. Their savings and pensions were cut down to nearly half the amount via the 'haircut' measure. They were dispossessed entirely and legally. This 'haircut' procedure, originally intended only as an emergency operation, is now becoming the standard in all new European government stocks. Of course it is linked directly to excluding the jurisdiction of court and, in small print, it compels people on a larger scale to abstain from asking any compensation for their losses. Doesn't that literally smell like, yet the next payment-default and reckless dispossession of the own citizens?

hf. Water is life, even a human right! According to the EU Commission, this should change – with drastic effects. For the first time Brussels is demanding that Portugal and Greece sell and privatize their water rights - the first step of the opening of the markets for the privatization of the water supplies of the whole of Europe. Water as a speculative resource? 82 % of the population is against this, because it is known that inevitably a price increase of 400 % and bad water quality will be the result. Drinking water: human right or speculative resource? Brussels has already decided against the will of the peoples for this billions-of-euros business. High time for a cold shower for all speculators.

Europe's collapse - or "Pride comes before a fall"

kw. Leading European politicians like José Manuel Barroso, Herman Van Rompuy and Germany's minister of finance Schäuble let it be known through the media at the start of the year that the Euro crisis is officially, "irrevocably and finally over". Rompuy, the president of the European Council, even spoke of the beginning of "one hundred years of peace". Considering the fact that the European economic data have been dramatically worsening, these statements are hyped up in terms of ignorance and arrogance. This is where the saying is fulfilled that pride comes before a fall. The following facts about Europe's collapse are-need-to-know information for every citizen:

- "In November, sales in the French auto industry have dropped by 28% compared to the previous year!
- The poverty rate in Greece is at 36%! In 2009, it was around 20%.
- The unemployment rate in Greece and Spain is higher than in the USA during the Great Depression of the 1930s!
- The unemployment rate in the Euro zone has risen to 11.8% - Higher than ever!
- The unemployment rate in Spain has risen to a breathtaking 26.6%!
- The Spanish unemployment rate for employees under 25 years of age is currently at 56.5% - that is a new all-time high!"

Even these shocking numbers cannot express how bad the situation really is on-site. Many people are suffering from depression and are completely at their wits' end. The current situation in Europe could be compared to the sinking of the Titanic:

Even though the captains responsible know that the ship is going down, they allow the band to keep playing cheerful tunes

A revolt preceded the fights in Mali

it. The country of Mali was considered to be a successful example of installing a democracy on the African continent. However, this changed in March 2012, when Amadou Toumani Touré, the head of the state at that time, was deprived of power by the military.* The commander of the Mali troops, Amadou Sanogo, was the leader of this military revolt. Sanogo had previously participated in military training programs in the US. In 2008 he was schooled in Arizona for intelligence service and in 2010 he attended a five-months training course for ground-troop officers in Georgia. Beforehand he had attended language school in Texas.

Upon pressure by the West African economic community (ECOWAS), a transition government was installed shortly after the putsch. The existing government led by Amadou Sanogo determined the political successors.

In this context it is interesting that the rebels canceled the presidential elections scheduled for April 29, 2012 after coming into power. While the US and their allies in their warmongering in the other African states always emphasize their purpose of installing stable democracies for the well-being of the people in these countries, in Mali the opposite is happening at present. The rebels who took the seat from the governing president and who call themselves "Restoration of Democracy and of the State" (short CNRDRE), are even supported in their actions by France. Seen from that angle, the situation in Mali suddenly looks quite different. There is similarity to Syria: in that case as well, France no longer excludes military action to support the "Free Syrian Army" against Assad's existing government. In Mali and the surrounding territories, important uranium deposits are assumed to exist - desirable to the highly energy consuming French nuclear power stations - as well as interesting oil, gold, and gas resources for the USA's depleted financial system and energy reserves. Who sees the connections?

*The MNLA (National Movement for the Liberation of the Azawad) took advantage of this situation and conquered in the following days all towns in the north of Mali by April.
