V&C-Hero-Tribute

Due to her extraordinary victory over unrighteousness and malice we nominate courier Andrea C. (24) from Germany as a V&C-Heroine.

What she reports in the editorial is such a different dimension compared to the cheap "no thanks" of certain V&C-critics who regard us as a mere defensive moaner and the V&C as a tame protest-paper. The less such people accomplish, the more they usually demand positive news and victory reports. Of course we want this too. Therefore go ahead yourselves all you critics, win victories and let us know. We'd love to publish them! However mere braggers don't do such things, do they? They rather ignore that even God began with "Let there be light" before he separated the upper waters from the lower waters.

Apropos "upper waters": a nice image of heroines likes Andrea C., gaining victories "in divine power" while the lower waters, like these loudmouths for instance, only part from others in contempt. Heartfelt congratulations, Andrea, your God is impressive!

Victory of the New World

ac. A few months ago I worked as a therapist in a retirement home of the German Red Cross. During that time I was witnessing the worst kind of abuse - often resulting in death. I could hardly assimilate what I was confronted with daily and when I talked about elderly people being raped repeatedly by employees or corpses of diseased left for two days in publicly accessible rooms with temperatures of about 25 degrees...then people would hardly believe me. I felt that I had to bring these problems to light but every way of communication within the company was blocked. Being concerned about the welfare of my patients and their often scared relatives I suddenly came under fire. A critic of the nursing procedures whom I met explained to me that the nursing home receives more subsidies for patients in higher care categories because the more affected elderly people need more support. Rehabilitation in the meaning of restoring to health was bad for the business and therefore not wanted.

I realized: The better I do

my job, the more I will get into trouble.

A short time later, I was fired and threatened in spite of highly content patients.

After several government inspections, I managed to make my counter-voice public. After that, many warriors of justice got in touch with me and thanked me for my „sacrifice”☺. But because the Red Cross tried to keep up their good reputation by playing down the situation and slandering me, no institution wanted to hire me any more...

Discouraged and insecure, I started to question myself but that just drove me further into a holy fury. I „girded” myself with truth and spoke into the emptiness around me: „Not the righteous but the unrighteous shall fall and the honour of the just will be revived by you, God!”

Through a new contact, I then obtained an email address of a senior manager of the German Red Cross. I sent them a letter and stated my experience. Because I knew that this person would not want to risk her job for helping me either, I challenged her to follow my example of humanity against all the greed for money and referred to the codex of the Red-Cross-Order.

One week later I received a letter from my “fans” ☺ to let me know that all the colleagues who were responsible for the wickedness or tried to damage me had been fired or sentenced and that the retirement home itself faced ruin. But God did better than that: I was offered a job in a leading position with a higher than average salary in a wonderful therapy centre which treats my favoured subject and isn't far from home. On top of that, I was invited to the Bavarian parliament to meet with leading politicians.

The best thing is that the people who could not believe in justice anymore have not been disappointed by the promise I gave them in the beginning: “You will see: If all your effort has been in vain so far, this will change now because justice is not being infringed any longer – now the new world reigns!!!”

Bolivia won the water war

elp. Cochabamba is the third largest city in Bolivia. The World Bank (!) made the privatization of its water supply a requirement for further loans to the government. In 1999, a 40 year contract was signed behind closed doors with a foreign company. Later it turned out to be the US corporation Bechtel (!). This contract contained the expropriation of wells that had been publicly constructed and used. People suddenly had to spend up to one quarter of their income just for water. The contract also prohibited the use of water from other sources such as rain (!). The government even deployed police forces to enforce the contract despite nationwide protests. Even though hundreds were injured and some even killed, the people fought until they had defeated the police and the army. Ultimately the US corporation Bechtel left the country as well. Oscar Olivera is a leader of the Coalition in Defense of Water in Bolivia. He said about the situation: "The water wars have shown that it is possible for people to defend themselves against the privatization strategies of the World Bank and corporations. They have shown that it is possible to organize ourselves, to unite, to overcome fears - and to win."

Abortion supporter becomes abortion opponent!

mo. The New Yorker Bernard Nathanson, a Jewish doctor, was one of the pioneers for the approval of abortion and in 1968 a founding member of the "National Abortion Right Action League". He ran the biggest abortion clinic in the United States and according to his own information, he was responsible for the death of 75,000 children. In the 1970s the new medical ultrasonic and CTG-technology helped to develop an understanding in him that the unborn fetus is a human being. In 1979 he became a pioneer of the true-to-life movement and unmasked the lies of the abortion lobby which they had used - under his leadership - to enforce legal abortions. In the 1980s he produced his world-famous film "The Silent Scream". The film shows a twelve week old child in the womb of its mother trying in vain to defend itself against the awful tool that starts to tear it apart. Bernard Nathanson came to the conviction that the life of a human being starts at the moment of procreation and that each abortion of an innocent and extremely defenseless creature is murder. If only his change of heart has a strong role model effect on others!

Local politician is enthusiastic

stm. A very fine lady and competent local politician was enchanted by the V&C and its design. Her statement: „It’s a superb performance and I like the fact that the articles of the V&C are written comprehensibly, in an easy language, so that everyone can understand what they are about even though some of them are covering difficult subjects. Besides, I am always very curious about the next edition and read the quotes in the V&C with joy. They simply do good and fit perfectly."

A quite unconventional way to deal with banks

dec. During the World Economic Forum in Davos, the Icelandic President Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson gave some very informative interviews regarding the positive developments in his country since 2008 when the Icelanders refused to save bankrupt banks with their tax money. In response to a remark that the situation in Iceland was completely different than in other countries, Grímsson said: "Although the situation is different in Iceland, I think that generally all countries, whether large or small, face similar challenges and can apply similar solutions. In our case, we decided to let the banks fail. They are private banks, and as I said, I never understood why banks should be the holy churches of the modern economy. While it is normal to let other private companies go bankrupt, when a bank is in trouble, suddenly everybody comes running and screaming: "No, no, no, we can't let this happen..." We went against the orthodox views of the financial world in the USA and Europe and now, four years later, Iceland is recovering in a remarkable way. Among other measures, this unconventional approach of handling banks that the Icelandic people have shown proves to be the key to overcoming the financial crisis. Why don't the other indebted states follow their example?

„Italy is bringing back the euro-crisis!“
Is Italy really bringing back the euro-crisis?
Here again you see how much they are trying to turn us into fools.
Was the euro-crisis over already? Or did I just miss something?
