Knowledge is power!

If humanity had known more about the true motives for the attacks on Iraq, Afghanistan or Libya a few years ago, their realization would not have been possible just like that.

If the citizens of the EU countries had known before that the rulers would bring their people to the verge of their existence and into brutal slavery of the banks, it would not have gone so far. Even if we all had known before what irreparable damage the pharmaceutical industry would cause worldwide we would have protested and saved the life of millions. We should learn from our lost opportunities and bring to mind: Knowledge is power! But enlightened individuals who know about things won't get us far. No, we need a comprehensively enlightened population that works maturely again. We can add our part here and now so that in the future we don't need to say: "Oh, dear! If only we had known before..."

Lies of politicians – broken promises uncovered

mh. Many people have already realized that politicians don't always speak the truth. Yet with the worldwide crisis getting more severe, above all the current capital-redistribution phase of which the Euro-crisis is merely the local edition for Europe, the cycles of lies and reality get shorter and shorter. Here are some examples: The German chancellor Angela Merkel said in March 2010: "There will be no financial aid for Greece." Yet in May 2010 the first financial support was approved by the EU. Or the German minister of finance Schäuble in 2010: "There will be no permanent bailout funds." In 2012 the ESM (European Stability Mechanism) was introduced. Again Merkel in June 2012: "There will be no joint liability as long as I live." In October 2012 the troika plans the second haircut for Greece which includes public creditors (amongst others the German tax payers) etc. This is just the tip of the iceberg. Politicians who deliberately spread lies have to be held accountable for deception towards citizens. Whoever has collected additional examples of obvious lies of politicians may send them to the editor.

Larceny to preserve the Euro?

"They have been warned. Theft is the new model to preserve the Euro", Nigel Farage posted on his Twitter account. In an interview with the newspaper "The Telegraph" the British representative in the European Parliament and member of the United Kingdom Independence Party (UKIP) gave a detailed comment on the development of Cyprus where owners of accounts with a balance of more than 100.000 € are facing severe compulsory charges. "Not even I expected that they would abase themselves so far, that they literally steal the people's money right out of their accounts." Farage said. He expects that there will be a huge flow of capital /money out of Cyprus. The same thing will happen in other countries of the Euro-zone, too. He refers to 750,000 British people living in Spain and owning real estate there. To those he recommends: "Get your money out of there as long as you still have a chance."

The EU is now taking hold of every possible option to save its dying Euro project according to Farage.

The pattern Cyprus

The involvement of shareholders, bond creditors and depositors in the recovery of faltering banks, like it is planned for Cyprus, serves as a model for upcoming bailouts in the event of crises. This was mentioned by the new head of the Euro-Group Dijsselbloem on Monday, March 25th 2013 in front of the news agency Reuters and the Financial Times. Brussels and many media outlets are now desperately trying to smooth out the statement of the head of the Group as it specifically means that the EU is planning to loot bank-accounts to save the banks. Did Mr. Dijsselbloem say something inconsiderate out of "foolishness" or did he really announce a route the EU wants to take? Since there are currently several EU-countries in a similar situation as Cyprus the latter is probably the sad truth.

The danger of half of the truth me. In the Syrian war a new level of escalation was reached on March 19th 2013. The mainstream-media reported the possible use of chemical weapons without being able to say who exactly had carried it out. However, according to the "Syrian observation post for human rights" there were 16 Syrian army soldiers among the 25 dead. In the ARD-Tagesschau (German news report) on March 19th 2013 at 8pm the following was reported: "In the Syrian conflict the government and the rebels accused each other of using chemical-weapons for the first time. Near Aleppo, at least 25 people died from the impact of a presumed poison-gas-grenade, and many were injured... Last year US-President Obama spoke about a red line and threatened military intervention in Syria." The fact that many mass-media outlets did not say anything about the 16 dead Syrian soldiers and therefore the obvious innocence of the Assad-regime is terrifying. This depiction could be used by the USA and NATO to legitimize an offensive war against the Syrian government for the alleged protection of the Syrian population.

North Korea – state of war by hacker attacks?

Amidst heavy frictions on the Korean peninsula, North Korea held the USA and South Korea indirectly responsible for the so-called cyber attacks to their computer networks. The internet servers of the government have been exposed to intense attacks the official North Korean news agency KCNA reported on Friday, March 15th 2013. The attacks were remarkable as they happened simultaneously with the military maneuvers of the American and South Korean armed forces. The Russian agency ITARTASS had already announced on Wednesday, March 13th 2013 that access to the internet in North Korea had been blocked. It is suspected that it was "a forceful hacker attack from outside". Recently the regime in Pyongyang had almost daily threatened to start a war and threatened the USA with an atomic strike. In addition North Korea has now officially proclaimed a state of war against South Korea. Is this devastating escalation only blind fanaticism or was it due to an "external interference"? This would at least explain the increasing tension between South- and North Korea and the North Korean hatred against the USA.

V&C is following up and will keep you informed about further backgrounds and developments.

Melting nation of law

sak. The USA is drifting further away from the characteristics of a constitutional state. "Since September 11th 2001", law-professor and journalist Jonathan Turley writes in the Washington Post, "the USA has extensively reduced the civil liberties in the name of an expanded security-state." An example for that is the National Defense Authorization Act which was signed on December 31st (!) 2001. It allows unlimited internment of citizens without charges being laid or a court judgment. Furthermore, President Barack Obama has extended the Patriot Act in 2011 to the effect that for no apparent reason the government can force organizations and companies to provide information about citizens. It is even forbidden for them to tell the affected people about the existence of such proceedings under threat of punishment. Is that not a melting constitutional state!

Victory Corner:

Politician for the people me. A county council delegate in "Nordrhein-Westfalen" (Germany) is actively lobbying for public referendums in Germany. After a V&C information event in March 2013 on the topic of "compulsory vaccination" he immediately sent an official inquiry to the district administration of the "Rhein-Sieg" county. One of his seven questions was: "Which additives do the standard vaccinations for babies and toddlers up to 2 years of age contain which you prescribe in the immunization schedule – chart 1.1? Formaldehyde and mercury, too? Please make a list of the additives." The district administration responded: "...the health authorities do not have any such list available." This very alarming answer had to be sent to all the other parties in the county council (German parties: CDU, SPD, Grüne...) and had to be taken in to the official protocol of the district administration. In this way the representative confronted the state parliament with different topics: "Danger of chemotherapy", "there is a cure for diabetes", "Dangers through the pharmaceutical lobby" etc. to stimulate politicians to think about these topics.

This politician regards the V&C as an important medium to thoroughly inform citizens, as even the public referendum which he demands is useless when the people only receive biased information. We need more politicians who fulfill their actual task and stand up for the real needs of the citizens and for healthy values, even in controversial matters.
