INTRO

Two angry dogs caterwaul at me, with barred teeth and diabolical expressions. They act like the media and their chums, I think to myself, but well, they are simply doing their job behind that miserable mesh. I am tempted to do a little test: How does one defeat snappish enemies? At first an insistent, fearless peer directly into those glowing eyes. Voilà, the sturdy dog suddenly begins to become embarrassed, and downright abashed but only for a short time. Then he starts snarling and pouncing again. The next time I come I bring two little morsels along for them. The beasts are silenced immediately and rush upon the prey. I calmly continue my walk. A few seconds later, my enemies are tearing on one another in an enormous uproar. But the pain pays off, because they are teaching me something about jealousy over food.

Transferring into our real-life field of conflict - this is what is happening between our State and Novartis. Somebody revealed a surreptitious hunk of meat between Novartis' "snappers" and promptly the money-hungry financial administration rushed upon it. The result: The state becomes richer, the pharmaceutical companies become poorer, medical costs decrease and because Novartis are persistent offenders they increasingly loose power and influence.

By the way: The next day both dogs received me with wagging tails. One of them even sat up and clapped his paws together begging. Well, you never stop learning!

Facts about the DSM-5

pace. This coming May, the fifth edition of the DSM will come out on the market.

That is the "Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders", which is the basis of treatment for millions of people. If the pharmaceutical industry gets their way there will shortly be billions in treatment.

For it is public knowledge that:

- This manual defines what a psychiatric disorder is and provides the definitions for the WHO!

- 69 percent of the authors of the DSM hold commercial connections to the pharmaceutical industry. That is an increase of 20 percent compared to 2006, when the DSM-4 was put together.

- In most of the task groups which were set up for drafting the DSM-5, experts with financial ties to the pharmaceutical companies were the majority.

- In the team for affective disorders they account for 67 percent of the members.

- In the team for psychotic disorders they account for 83 percent.

- In the team working on insomnia they account for 100 percent!

- Every sixth of these experts works as a medical representative for drug producers or is a member on their advisory boards!

- There are no clear biological indications for any of the psychiatric disorders described in the DSM-5 that could be determined, for example through blood analysis or brain scans!

- Diagnosing the patient lies in the hands of the doctors alone.

It seems to me that this manual will become the basis of a gigantic business, which talks humanity into being sick, and for their "services", fills its pockets full of profits.

Of course, all this at the expense of the state, and of the citizens paying health insurance!

Who is still prepared to donate his organs?

dec. While it is still being debated whether brain death can be defined as an irreversible point of death, America and Switzerland are already utilizing organs from human bodies where cardiac arrest has taken place (defined as clinical death). This is even the case if other criteria for brain death are not fulfilled yet. Already from 1 September 2011, the Swiss Academy of Medical Sciences has been applying this standard, not waiting for a modification of the transplantation law by the Federal Health Agency (BAG). The BAG is intending to update the law in favor of legalizing organ removal after a cardiac arrest (which is still illegal in Germany and Canada), without the permission of the organ donor. The administration of medication prior to the actual death-process is to be legalized as well. These steps are potentially painful and of no advantage for the donor. Margot Michel, a medicine lawyer from Zurich writes in her analysis: "There is an acute danger that dying patients might be exploited in advance of their death due to financial interests." Once again it becomes evident how quickly laws are altered without public consent. Without even informing us beforehand the way is paved for a lucrative and ruthless organ trade. Is this democratic, and are we still prepared to donate our organs ?

The government does not protect its citizens and officials!

uw. "Radio without rescue" titles the legal essay written by the retired judge Bernd Budzinski. It points out the contradiction between the formal duty of public officials to use radio technology on the one hand and the health and retirement insurance companies not being liable in case of health damages on the other hand. For instance, in the cases of the digital radio for public services TETRA and the radar technique (used by the German military, also in former GDR). The government obliges its officials to use these techniques, but on the other side the concerned health insurances exclude the damages caused by these techniques - although these dangers have been well known for a long time. In Great Britain, 176 police officers have already taken legal action against their employer for health damages. German soldiers who must deal with radar technique have been rather poorly recompensed. How much suffering is necessary that they will understand that this government does not protect neither its officials nor its citizens?

Victory Corner:

Well done enlightenment services!

An enlightenment service has managed to prove bribery of physicians to the chemistry giant Novartis. As SRF1 had to report at 24.4. at 8.00 o'clock in the morning, Novartis paid bribe money to doctors, so they prescribed to their patients, instead of the more cost-effective generics, their expensive products. In this way, the pharmaceutical giant violated not only several laws in a self enriching manner, but the medical expenses shot up tremendously, which in the end always get passed on to you, the premium payer. As a persistent offender, Novartis has now to expect an unbelievably striking fine. If sincere doctors are joining forces and instead of taking bribe money, press charges, they deliver the people from large financial burdens. Also teachers, sincere politicians, scientists, religious leaders and so on, are able to contribute suchlike for general relief, by revealing boldly and fearlessly all the injustice around them. To everyone who does this, a hearty well done!

Charging mobile phone without charger

di. In future mobile phones are to be supplied with power without charger. "The prototype is able to charge itself by radio signals of WLAN stations, mobile- and TV-antennas and other radio sources surrounding us constantly", states Markku Rouvala in the scientific magazine "Technology Review". Rouvala is one of the researchers, who have developed this prototype at the Nokia Research Centre in Cambridge in the last few years. "The charging of the battery by electric smog is enough for the unlimited stand-by operation of the mobile phone", explains Rouvala. In order to reach the power of 50 milliwatts needed for this about 1.000 strong radio signals have to be present in the area, say critics of the project. How strongly the world we live in must be polluted by electric smog, if you are already able to operate millions of mobile phones in the unlimited stand-by mode with it! The people responsible for this subtle genocide will only prevail as long as our judges are corrupt.

Did mobile phone radiation drive pastor into death?

mf. Carsten Häublein (55), former protestant pastor of Oberammergau, complained about a constant roaring in his head, rapid heartbeat, breathlessness and vibrating of his whole body, after the modification of the transmitter for mobile radiocommunication in Oberammergau in summer 2006. What started for the reverend with slight insomnia and nocturnal hot flashes, increased in course of time until he could hardly bear to remain in his rectory. In fall 2006 Häublein complained: "I'm tormented of so far unknown headache and joint pain, numbness, eye burning, loss of concentration, anxiety and high blood pressure." His rectory in Oberammergau was irradiated by four transmitters. Occasionally Häublein stayed overnight in the sacristy of his church, in the cellar, in the car and even in the forest to escape the radiation. In spring 2009 Häublein moved to Schleswig-Holstein in a nearly radiation-free region. There he recovered very fast. Though in summer last year, the health situation of the reverend deteriorated again dramatically. He explained it by the introduction of the LTE-service for the fourth generation of mobile communications for fast wireless internet access. Obviously, the symptoms got more and more unbearable for him, before he brought his life to an end.

Mobile radio tower in Betzdorf dismantled – Well done!

uw. The example in Betzdorf clearly shows us that it is possible to have existing transceiver stations dismantled. In this specific case the original owner, the Südwestrundfunk (SWR), had sublet the mobile radio tower in Betzdorf to several, private mobile network operators without the consent of the landowner. This was illegal and the complete removal of the station was ordered. That was not the first case of this kind. There are about 300-500 mobile radio towers of SWR, in Baden-Württemberg (southwest region in Germany). They are nearly all equipped with new, private transceiver stations. However, very few of them have permission from the landowner. Therefore, there is much potential for the removal of more mobile radio towers.
