INTRO: Flared tempers

Investigative information work resembles a march through the desert. Desert animals are equipped with some tricks, for example for not drying out at 60° Celsius or in order to not die from a heat stroke. So let's learn from them:

Some of them bury themselves in cooler sand layers. Certainly I'm not commending the head-in-the-sand attitude here, but for example to bury oneself in "success stories"... "V&C Victory corner" etc. Or read now and then an encouraging book... such as "Lord of transformation" by Ivo Sasek ©.

Chameleons assume a white color, so their body doesn't heat up much. That means, a "clean record" cools down. The book mentioned above will teach you how to achieve this. The paw-lizard has an absolute super-heat trick. Its too delicate feet heat up so much in the blistering hot sand that it lifts alternately crosswise a fore leg and a hind leg into the air. That looks a bit high-handed and even silly, but gives already a few centimeters above the ground its cooling effect.

Two deductions for us: Don't get upset always about the same issue, get upset once in a while about something else ©. Better to tell yourself: "Although I still cannot fly, I can already lift my heated limbs up crosswise to heaven. From up there, there's mostly just cool air coming, but that's what we need right now." So take the slight "V&C-breezes" as a small advance on the final, real help from above.

Well, my tips might not be absolutely great, but... maybe a little bit cooling...

The State Office of Criminal Investigation of Saxony-Anhalt wants to stop non-cooperative vehicles using microwave weapons.

uw. German authorities are now officially participating in the European Union SAVELEC* project. Its aim is the development of microwave weapons that would allow the police and the Federal Border Guard to stop so called "non-cooperative vehicles" using electromagnetic impulses. It is interesting to note that up until now, officials had always denied the existence of electromagnetic pulse weapons. In reality, their development and production has been carried out by the weapons manufacturers Diehl and Rheinmetall for more than 10 years. The police will soon be employing technologies that so far have only been utilized in drones and E-Bombs. Good luck to everyone chosen as targets for such microwave attacks. May you survive this in one piece!

Incarnated in the spare parts storage

is. Finally so-called science succeeded in cloning embryos from human stem cells. But do these cloners of humans know enough about reincarnation? Because already now two things are obvious: On the one hand cloning costs the lives of already existing embryos – on the other hand beckons the profitable business of the "human-spare-parts trade"! But where there are spare parts, there must also be spare part storage. What these look like, is already staring us in the face. Just as already anticipated in science-fiction movies, it will be a matter of somehow "canned" human bodies... so to say a living man in a can. That by now something like this is not abstract anymore, shows the living embryo in vitro well enough. But over both, the embryo and the full grown man in vitro, gapes an eerie hole of ignorance: Where do the souls of these canned human bodies remain in the meantime? Ah! They don't have one? Did you try this yourself? You see, that's how lightly science takes it. But one thing is certain already: If these fellows are once more mistaken - as usual, a carmic law will ensure that in the next reincarnation they will truly know. In fact, you can only know truly by personal experience. In their case that means that their souls will be helplessly locked up in a scientific preserved body... to dissection and the consequent death... and this so often, until they know, how to eliminate effectively such nonsense.

Big investors in Cyprus face huge losses

The investors of the Bank of Cyprus with a deposit above 100.000 Euros have to face severe losses. A compulsory charge of up to 60 percent for each Euro above this protected amount is threatening. According to the minister of finance Michalis Sarris, in a first step rich people will be asked to pay up to 37,5 percent of their deposit above the 100.000 Euro limit. For example somebody keeps 200.000 Euros in the Bank of Cyprus. Then 100.000 Euros stay safe. On the residual 100.000 Euros there will be first a compulsory charge of 37,5 percent – thus 37.500 Euros, according to Sarris. Further 22.500 Euros will be put aside. If the Bank of Cyprus needs more money for their rescue, they will take these 22,5 percent, too. For their losses the investors will get shares of the Bank. Well, if that isn't theft on large scale ...

The end of purchasing power – or this is the way inflation works: price remains, product becomes smaller

Inflation in practice: Seven years ago there were 47 diapers in a package of Pampers, today there are only 34 pieces in it. If that trend keeps going on, the package will be empty in 20 years. Nevertheless Mario Draghi claims: The inflation in Europe persists at a sustained low level.

Victory corner:

Well done, Austria! Withdrawal from the EU – Non-partisan referendum

Because the Austrian citizens do not want to be serving any longer as cash cow for the “rescue” of the expensive EURO and the mismanagement of the banks!

The ever higher payments of billions for “Brussels” (the bottomless pit) imply a cold expropriation of the people’s income. Instead of this: re-entrance into the functioning and economical EFTA (European Free Trade Agreement) to regulate the commercial relationships.

Because true neutrality excludes any involvement in a military pact, such as the EU-army (with her close relationship to the NATO) – see Switzerland.

Because we do not want to remain a member of the nuclear power EU and do not want to pay for it any longer (EURATOM Treaty!).

Because the highest principle of the EU – the boundless, completely unbridled FREE TRADE – serves only the owners of the corporations to the detriment of the national economy, nature and health!

Consequences: Decline of salaries, wages and pensions; loss of local supply; transport of living animals over huge distances; no protection from import of GMOs.

Because the most important principles of any democracy (for example the separation of powers) have been neutralized with the Lisbon Treaty, the prevailing working basis of the EU. Non-elected commissioners decide. The “Parliament” of the EU has no legislative power.

The silent enlightenment fighter

me. The meteorologist Dr. Karsten Brandt warned in 2010 in a documentary of ZDF about the dangers of fiber glass/aluminum particles, which are spread by the ton all over the German airspace. According to inquiries from ZDF it is a matter of military operations to disturb radar equipments. In this documentary the dangers of these particles were proven by scientists. These materials are not biodegradable. In February 2013, when a local politician submitted this issue to the county council, he got the following answer from the above mentioned meteorologist: “Please refrain spreading conspiracy theories. It’s simply embarrassing [...] spare the county council this.” The politician explained, that he made this inquiry because of concerned citizens and that it is his duty to stand up for them. Thereupon Dr. Brandt answered: “Once again my advice – keep the hands off this. There is nothing to it.”

The sudden and almost frantic change of mind of Dr. Brandt should make us wonder, because he and the ZDF were obviously silenced. So let us all the more open our mouths and be a voice where a voice is missing.

Victory corner:

Well done Soldier King!

On February 25th, 1713, the Prussian Friedrich Wilhelm I. (1688 – 1740, King from 1713 on), later to be called “Soldier King”, stood at the deathbed of his father. When the death of King Friedrich I. (1657 – 1713, elector since 1688, king since 1701) was announced in the foyer, where a crowd of courtiers was waiting, their faces showed more fright than grief, because the deceased one loved luxury and left behind a large national debt. But his son was determined to make the state healthy and strong again through simplicity. The heir to the throne had – still with tears in his eyes – barely left the death chamber, when he requested the list of the courtiers from the Grand Marshal and annulled it from the bottom to the top with a stroke of his pen.

Then the new King dictated his first written command. “Let the Prince of Anhalt know that I, myself, am the minister of finance and the field marshal of the King of Prussia; that will keep the King of Prussia upright.”

On his visits the economical King was usually accompanied only by his secretary, his servant Eversmann and the coachman. Almost always they invited themselves at the schoolmaster of the village and slept in the barn. That way the King was able to once demonstrate to the Queen that he only spent six Thalers for the long journey from Königsberg in East Prussia to Berlin.
