INTRO

The first article in this issue is already sufficient evidence for the consequences of not denouncing undesirable developments. The devil unscrupulously shows his horns, along with his ugly head and his cloven hoof! He blares out boldly his deadly plans – and prides himself with receiving the highest awards from the highest government- and department circles. When facing these outright satanic developments, the lethargic folk remain inactive and hypnotized. Well, little book-keepers lose their job, and the postmen their license, when they embezzle just a few hundred Euro... but the world's most prominent bankers, who by fraud and deception have driven whole nations into poverty and thereby scammed multi-billion dollar amounts, get away with a token-fine of 14 billion and then keep on scamming the people.

And so what, children are taken away from their loving mothers, when they, full of sorrow, slapped them just once, teachers are dragged through the media and get defamed if they grapple with the rebellious a little harder. But treacherous agitators like Peter Singer, who contest a newborn baby's right to life for at least one month after birth and intend to "donate to science" undesired babies, are allowed to walk around free and unpunished with their "ethic-awards".

Well then, go back to sleep until these problems come up to you. But we remain true to phase one: Let there be light! The V&C needs to be spread abroad in every household!

Postnatal abortion – a model of the future?

ihv. I am sitting on the sofa with my four-week-old baby. He is looking up at me with his big eyes while I breast feed him. For a few days now, he has been smiling at me every time I take him into my arms. Now I am reading an interview with the renowned Jewish Professor of Bio-ethics at Princeton University, Peter Singer, who speaks about his ideas of the newborns' right to life: He said .. "In my view, the birth does not represent an absolute turning point where you could say: "Before, the fetus did not have a right to life at all, and after the birth it has the right to life just as any healthy adult. [...] Theoretically, you could imagine a society with different values, a society that differentiates between babies that are truly loved and raised up and others that are donated to science. [...] I once suggested not applying the full right to life until 28 days after the birth. [...] That would give the parents time for their decision." In 2011, Peter Singer was recognized with the Ethics Prize of the Giordano Bruno Foundation and he was named as a "Companion of the order of Australia" in 2012. This order was established by Queen Elizabeth II in 1975 and is only awarded for the highest services for Australia or humanity...

100 Years of the Federal Reserve - 100 Years of the perfect crime

hj. Did you know that exactly 100 years ago the foundation of the American central bank, the Federal Reserve or FED for short, required an unprecedented coup? J.P. Morgan was one of the richest Americans at the time and an agent of the Rothschild family. Contemporary witnesses reported that he had deliberately spread rumors in 1907 about the bankruptcy of a New York bank. This led to the Panic of 1907, one of the most famous bank runs in history. As a result of this mass panic, which had been caused by Morgan, he himself was chosen to establish a committee with the mission of preventing such crises in the future. Headed by Nelson W. Aldrich, a son in law of the famous Rockefeller family, its agenda was drawn up in 1910 at a secret meeting on Jekyll Island, which was the holiday resort of J.P.

Morgan. Frank Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York at the time, remembers details of the meeting: The visitors had been asked to behave and appear most discreetly and to come alone to the train station where Aldrich's car was waiting. "We knew that we must not be discovered [...] if the public knew that our group had drafted a banking law, this law would never have had a chance in Congress." The Federal Reserve Act was the American central banking law that allowed the establishment of the FED. It was enacted on December 23rd, 1913, just before Christmas Eve. It was waved through without much of a debate by the few congressmen who were still present on that day. No one understood that the legislation had been written by the abhorred financial elite that it was claimed to break with and had greatly stabilized their power. Just one hour after it had been voted on in Congress, the law was signed by the American president Woodrow Wilson. Charles A. Lindbergh senior later told congress: "This law establishes the biggest cartel on the planet [...], it legalizes the shadow government of the money power..." Since that treacherous scam, there now exists a legal cartel of banks and politicians with the right to print money without end and to lend it to the American government with interest! In summary: 100 years ago, a few bankers intentionally abused democratic weaknesses and used the FED to take control of the world economy. Is it possible that the West tries to force democracy upon the rest of the world so that similar scams can be repeated there?

Central Banks: The greatest robbers of all time

Central banks force down interest rates and thus commandeer people's savings. The governments save billions each year at the expense of their citizens who are fleeced by inflation.

When the cover is blown a monetary reform is inevitable. The historically low interest rates have caused a decline in the wealth of German savers of approx. 14 billion Euro in 2013

according to estimates by the Postbank. The cause is the high inflation rate compared to the interest level says the chief strategist of Postbank Marco Bargel. He calls the minus a "mighty wealth destruction" which causes damage. On the other hand the German government pays over 100 billion Euro less interest for their bonds caused by the historically low interest rates. This is money which actually belongs to investors and savers. Indirectly we are all savers because we are customers of life insurance companies and pension funds which buy these low yielding bonds.

Original quote

"As an economist I had to bid farewell to a good many of my cherished 'certainties'. I had to accept that many things I thought I understood about the economy were simply not true. That big banks suspend the rules of economy and let tax payers suffer for their mistakes. When I was traveling Ireland to conduct interviews with people I met many who were paying bitterly for the mistakes of the bank managers. To see this was very hard for me to bear."

Fear: a power strategy

"Way back in 1981, President Ronald Reagan used the term "war against terror" with exactly the same rhetoric as was used after 9/11. Who were the terrorists in those days? It was the Sandinistas from Nicaragua. The government asserted that at any time they could invade Texas which was just a two day march away from Nicaragua. All of America trembled. George Schultz, the Foreign Minister of that time claimed in all seriousness, that the Sandinistas were following a strategy from Hitler's book "My Fight" and had planned a conquest of the hemisphere. Just imagine this: One of the poorest countries of North and South America is going to invade Washington, and conquer the hemisphere according to Adolf Hitler's book, which according to counter-voices, does not even contain such strategies. For the sake of this existential threat towards the United States security, Ronald Reagan declared a state of emergency and also had it extended from year to year. At the same time he entrenched himself in the White House, because - allegedly - by Gaddafi's orders, Libyan killers were hanging out in the streets of Washington. Fear is a strategy of power politics. That is how power works - that is until every citizen, simply by adding up one plus one, unmasks the underlying deceptions.

Closing Point •

When 10,000 V&C readers each faithfully pass on every V&C issue to 10 more readers, then we have 100,000 regular readers.

Now calculate yourself: When, on the other hand, 10,000 V&C readers become "couriers" by simply getting "their 3" couriers to getting also "their 3" couriers (and so on...) to only copy the V&C three times and have it picked up the next day at their place, then we will have every week more than 21 million regular readers.

Which strategy will be chosen by our more than 10,000 V&C readers (including German and other languages)?

Kristina Schröder – on the way to being a fulltime mother?

ham. The surprise parting of the German Minister of Family Affairs Kristina Schröder took place quietly in the shadow of the federal elections. Mrs Schröder's personal reasons for her withdrawal were because of Lotte, her first child. Schröder justified her decision by saying, "There have been many situations, where I missed beautiful moments in the life of my daughter". That is all the more astonishing, because the Ministry of Family Affairs draw a totally different picture of the family by a variety of campaigns: There is talk of "Flexiquote", that would bring more women into leadership position by law, of the omnipresent "balancing job and family" and a nationwide offer for full-time childcare for the youngest. The "modern mother" has to be ready, at least part-time, for the job market as a female qualified employee. And now our Lady Minister packs her things and goes home to have more time in the future, especially for her two-year-old daughter.

If Mrs Schröder would additionally resign voluntarily as a Member of Parliament, then she would have the best chances to be in all the beautiful moments in the young life of her daughter – as a real full-time mother giving her undivided attention.
