THE PEOPLE HAVE A RIGHT TO VOICE AND COUNTERVOICE

~ No. 2/14 ~

INTRO

Do you also find it hard to believe sometimes what you read in the V&C every week? Or do you belong to those people who already know about most of the topics and who suffer under the burden of the information because you have realized that most of it is the truth? Even us editors are shocked afresh by the outrageous backgrounds and connections that are threatening all humanity as never before. These are being exposed step by step which is exactly why V&C exists so that we do not become resigned or dull because of what we already know. No! The ones who are responsible for these evils might try to restrict and even take away our living space and breath, but we keep exposing all evil intentions and deeds until 'they' run out of breath.

Chernobyl - Accident or Hidden Warfare?

wm. Is the real background of the Chernobyl "accident" from 1986 still being kept secret today? Numerous experts seem to think so. One of them is K.P. Chetcherov, a scientist of the Chernobyl clearance commando. He presented a series of inconsistencies, among them the instruction by the KGB* to keep secret all information about the real cause of the disaster. The renowned radiobiologist Prof. Edmund Lengfelder spoke of the Chernobyl reactors as the power supply for gigantic microwave antennas which were located nearby. This so called "Star Wars" program was meant to be used, among other things, as a missile defense system by the Soviets. According to lawyer and publicist Dr. Peter D. Beter, this program was a strong motive for the American determination to stop the Russian technological progress. Tom Bearden, a former U.S. lieutenant colonel, analyst for the Pentagon, and scalar wave** specialist, spoke in 1988 at the "World Science Conference on Security and Disarmament". His talk was about "secret super-weapons that drive on the disarmament negotiations" and he mentioned scalar weapon battles between the USA and the USSR in connection with the nuclear disaster. He explained that such weapons were capable of manipulating earthquakes and weather conditions. He stated that he himself had agreed to an EMP (electromagnetic pulse) attack in 1986 which had disabled the antennas and led to the nuclear meltdown. Numerous witnesses report having seen blue gleams of light on the day of the disaster, which is a strong indication of ionized air, which in turn is a common phenomenon with EMPs. Furthermore, measurements just before the detonation of the core of the reactor showed a very strong and unexplained earthquake. Does all of this not imply that certain military institutions have for some time been able to detonate nuclear reactors anywhere on the planet? And does this in turn not force us to reconsider the official story behind the Fukushima meltdown?

American nuclear research stops at nothing

rh. In 1942, the „Manhattan Project“ was started in America not only with the focus on the development of the nuclear bomb but also including a medical research department researching the effects of radioactive contamination on human beings.

Although World War II was basically over in August 1945 and the Japanese government wanted to start peace negotiations with the USA, the then-US-president Truman did not accept their offer. Instead, a uranium bomb was dropped on Hiroshima and a plutonium bomb on Nagasaki. On September 1st, 1945 the supreme general Douglas MacArthur declared all radiation victims to be property of the American nuclear research. Any treatment or examination of the already dead or still alive victims was prohibited for Japanese doctors under threat of imprisonment. Instead, American doctors and photographers came in droves to conduct their research and to document it with photographs, keeping the results top secret. According to Kazuhiko Kobayashi, leader of the anti-nuclear movement in Japan, from 1940 to 1989 experiments were carried out even on the American people: Plutonium was added to vaccines and injected to children suffering from cancer. Some of them died in agony. Until today, all those atrocities have neither come to terms yet nor have been made good again.

* After Germany's surrender in May 1945, Japan was still at war with the USA.

Termination of parental rights by the state

sep. The Federal Administrative Court (BVerwG) decided on September 11th, 2013: "With compulsory schooling, parents have to accept, that the state, as responsible for education, replaces them within the extent of school education and activities, whereby parents' ability to influence their children will be limited to outside the school area." With this decision the fundamental right in art. 6 par. 2 of the German constitution will also be limited. This says that the care and education of children is the natural right of parents. Yet the BVerwG intervenes in the parental educational right, which says: "[...] It is up to the parents to communicate to their children their own faith and ideology, which they think are right. This means at the same time, the right to keep them away from faith convictions, which they consider as wrong and harmful."

In a time of always earlier school enrolment (in Berlin for example, compulsory schooling starts at five years of age) and the increasing tendency towards all-day schooling, an urgent question arises: When do the parents find time to pass their own values on to their children?

„Transatlantic Free Trade Area“ – The big subjugation?

lo. The project „Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership“ (TTIP), that corresponds to the Transatlantic Free Trade Area (TAFTA), equals a slow motion coup d'état, that irreversibly guarantees and expands the privileges of corporations and investors. The negotiations held behind closed doors have the goal to eliminate all national regulations that could minimize the value of investments. In that way Germany could be sued for damages, if they would introduce a minimum salary regime and in this way future profits of a company would be impaired so that compensation payments would be due. The protection from chloride- and hormone-treated meat as well as from GMO-food* would cease to apply. So that there would be neither protection duty nor any limitation in range of goods within the free trade area. That means that all goods could be offered anywhere – even genetically modified food. National law that could cut back on risky financial services could be lifted by legal action. The leading arbitration tribunal would be occupied by lawyers of the private sector and submitted to the control of the World Bank and the United Nations. Their plans of a one-world government and disbanding of all nations is becoming more and more obvious. Therefore we must not bring in this Trojan horse "Transatlantic Free Trade Area"!

A Hymn to Life

"March for the babies" saves triplets

juh. On October 12th, 2013 a "March for the babies" took place in Melbourne (Australia) for the fifth time. About 3.000 participants demanded that a law passed in 2008, which cancels all legal protection for unborn children, be reversed. About 200 violent counter-demonstrators disturbed the life protection protest march and tried to stop them with verbal and physical violence. A young woman marching with the counter demonstrators, pregnant with triplets, was so shocked with the aggression of the counter-demonstrators, that she cancelled her planned abortion! Because of that extraordinary happening the march reached its goal despite all the dreadful events. Life is stronger than death!

Child is listening – long before birth

fe. "Even before birth, babies can dream, kiss, and feel." Observing fetuses, researchers discovered that their sensory perceptions are formed as early as the third week after conception. Their sense of touch, for example, is active from the eighth week on. The fetus cuddles the placenta and experiences touch from the outside, for example the hand of a mother or father on his or her belly. They are able to feel joy, fear and anger. Twins kiss and hug and some scuffle with each other. The hearing also plays a really important part from the seventeenth week on as the child perceives the heartbeat of the mother. Later her voice is deeply and distinctively impressed upon the child. Almost all the potential possibilities of a viable human being occur quite early in the womb of the mother.
